Thai Vietjet announces new international services

Thai Vietjet, the new-age carrier based at Bangkok Suvarnabhumi Airport, continues its international network expansion to Vietnam and Taiwan. The airline plans to start daily flight service from Bangkok to Da Nang – a coastal city in central Vietnam – starting 15th October 2018, followed by Bangkok – Taichung new service at 5 flights/week on every Monday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday starting from 3rd November 2018, on the grand opening of 2018 Taichung World Flora Exposition. Both cities has recently become popular destinations in the region for their unique charm and various must-visit attractions.

Vietjet opens sales for Phu Quoc– Seoul route

To welcome the year-end festive seasons, Vietjet also opens sales for Phu Quoc (Vietnam) – Seoul (South Korea) route. The new route will connect the two famous tourist destinations, meeting the traveling demands of local people and tourists as well as contributing to the development of trade and integration in the region. It is time for Hongkongese to plan their multi- destination trip. It will operate a daily return flight from December 22, 2018 with the flight time of around 5 hours 30 minutes per leg. The flight departs from Phu Quoc at 15:30 and arrives at Seoul at 22:45. The return flight takes off from Seoul at 01:45 and lands in Phu Quoc at 05:35.

As part of Kien Giang province, Phu Quoc is known as “Pearl Island”, the largest island in Vietnam. Being a famous travel destination, Phu Quoc has significantly attracted investment in tourism projects and resort real estates. Upon launching the new route connecting Phu Quoc to South Korea’s capital, Vietjet not only brings safe, civilized and modern air travel to local people and tourists but also promotes trade and contributes to improving the local investment.
